DEDICATED TO UGE JAS. L. ACTAY. Burgh of Freedom ! attend forever, Frond y as you stand to-day. From your summits pass away.

"Yield," the haughty teeman cried, tre a hundred cannon speak.
And your praceful atreets be dyed.
With the blood we do not seek."

Answered dauntiess Vicksburg then.
"Yours the flead, but ours the field,
We are freemed, we are men.
And 'we know not how to yield!"

Mississippi, in her pride, standing by her ghost flood, Plings the rener banner wide, stiffened with her bravest blood.

Leap like monsters from their lair Shattering bombs, and cannon pour Wasted thurders on the sir. lion, wasted on the chore.

Broad anfolding to the view, Brightly glean the Southern stars, Rising in their field of blue. And our score of gues reply,

Proudly float the crimson bars,

Sternly asswering, roar for roar, Mississippi's sons can die As their sires have died before." Nor shall shot, or shell, or flame. Laose our death hold on the river, Bearing Mississirer's name, Mingled with its waves forever. And on Vicksburg's shattered hill, Though they lay her to the land, Proudly on the viocatill Where she stood shall Freedom stand.

Burgh of Freedom ! sole and lonely, Fortress of our inland sea. On her shore the last and only Home and rampart of the free.

Stand forever, as you stood When you barred the tyrant's way; When his fleets upon the dood Baffled at year briwn ks lay.
